

CONTRIBUTORS/COLLABORATEURS

Errol Black teaches economics at Brandon University. He is a member of the editorial collective of Canadian Dimension.

John Bullen teaches labour history at the Labour College and is completing a doctorate in history at the University of Ottawa.

Bruce Curtis is a member of the sociology department at Wilfrid Laurier University. He is currently working on Canadian state formation.

F.K. Donnelly teaches British social history at the University of New Brunswick at Saint John.

James Epstein, co-editor of The Chartist Experience, is currently at Duke University.

Blair Laidlaw has been a postal worker since 1975.

André LeBlanc of Champlain Regional College has been a member of Labour/Le Travail's editorial board since 1976. He is completing a new version of Le Monde Ouvrier.

Joseph Maviglia, the son of Italian immigrants to Canada, is a Toronto poet whose work has appeared in The Fiddlehead, Canadian Literature, and The Dalhousie Review.

Ian McKay is an editor of New Maritimes and teaches at St. Mary's University in Halifax, N.S.

Barbara Roberts is a feminist historian and peace activist currently living in Halifax, N.S.

Ronald Rudin, author of Banking en français, teaches history at Concordia University in Montreal.

Allen Seager, secretary of the Committee on Canadian Labour History, teaches at Simon Fraser University, Burnaby, B.C.

Michael Welton is an educational historian at Dalhousie University in Halifax, N.S.