

CONTRIBUTORS

Gene Homel, a historian at Simon Fraser University, recently completed a University of Toronto dissertation on Jimmy Simpson.

Allen Mills teaches political science at the University of Winnipeg and is review editor of the Canadian Journal of Political and Social Theory.

W.J.C. Cherwinski, a member of the Memorial University of Newfoundland Department of History, specializes in the history of western Canadian labour.

Allen Seager, recently appointed to the Department of History at Simon Fraser University, is completing a York University thesis on western Canadian miners.

Wallace Clement teaches sociology at Carleton University and his most recent book is Hardrock Mining: Industrial Relations and Technological Change at Inco.

Nancy Stunden, now living in Winnipeg, was labour archivist at the Public Archives of Canada.

William Dick teaches American labour history at Scarborough College and is the author of Labor and Socialism in America: The Gompers Years.

Nolan Reilly is a member of the University of Winnipeg History Department and is completing a Dalhousie Ph.D. on workers in Amherst, N.S. in the early twentieth century.

Robert Storey is working on a University of Toronto Ph.D. thesis in sociology on Hamilton steelworkers in the 1930s and 1940s.

Larry Peterson works for Holt, Rinehart in New York and received a Columbia Ph.D. for his study of the KPD in the 1920s.