

CONTRIBUTORS/COLLABORATEURS

Ruth Bleasdale is a doctoral candidate in history at the University of Western Ontario.

Larry Peterson works for Holt, Rinehart in New York and received a Columbia Ph.D. for his study of the KPD in the 1920s.

Gregory S. Kealey is currently enjoying St. John's, while on sabbatical from Dalhousie University. Editor of Labour/Le Travailleur since 1976, he has recently become the editor of the McClelland and Stewart Canadian Social History Series. His most recent publication is Toronto Workers Respond to Industrial Capitalism, 1867-1892. Now underway is a history of the Ontario working class to 1919.

David Bercuson, a founding member of the editorial board of Labour/Le Travailleur, is co-editor of the Canadian Historical Review and teaches at the University of Calgary. Author of Confrontation at Winnipeg and Fools and Wise Men, he is now working on relations between Canada and Israel.

Gail Cuthbert Brandt is an Associate Professor of History at Glendon College, York University and is currently working on a history of women in the Quebec cotton industry, 1891-1951.

Robert Babcock is a professor of history at the University of Maine at Orono and the author of Gompers in Canada.

Brian Hogan is the author of Cobalt: Year of the Strike, 1919 and is a doctoral student in history at the University of Toronto.

Jean Morrison lives in Thunder Bay and has published on the working class at the Lakehead in the early twentieth century.

Michael Behiels teaches history at Acadia University and works on twentieth-century Quebec nationalism.

Bruno Ramirez, author of When Workers Fight: The Politics of Industrial Relations in the Progressive Era, 1898-1916, teaches American history at the Université de Montréal.

N.G.O. Pereira teaches history at Dalhousie University and has published on nineteenth-century Russian intellectual history.