

CONTRIBUTORS

Charles Bergquist holds the Harry Bridges Chair of Labour Studies at the University of Washington, is the author of Labor and the Course of American Democracy, and is a member of Labour/Le Travail's International Advisory Board.

Mark Bray teaches Industrial Relations at the University of Sydney, Sydney, Australia.

Jacques Ferland teaches history at the University of Maine at Orono.

Raelene Frances teaches history at the University of New South Wales in Sydney and is the author of The Politics of Work and co-author of Women at Work in Australia from the Gold Rushes to World War II.

Gerald Friesen teaches history at the University of Manitoba and is the author of The Canadian Prairies: A History.

Stephen Garton teaches history at the University of Sydney and is the author of Out of Luck and The Cost of War (forthcoming).

Franca Iacovetta is the author of Such Hardworking People, teaches history at the University of Toronto, and is completing a book on "experts" and immigrant "clients" in Cold War Canada.

Terry Irving teaches political sociology at the University of Sydney, with a special interest in class and social movements. He is the editor of Labour History.

Gregory S. Kealey teaches History at Memorial University of Newfoundland and is the author of Workers and Canadian History and is the editor of Labour/Le Travail.

Linda Kealey is the Head of the Memorial University History Department and editor of A Not Unreasonable Claim, Beyond the Vote, and the Canadian Historical Review.

Margaret E. McCallum teaches law at the University of New Brunswick, Fredericton NB.

Associate Professor Anne McGrath teaches at the University of New South Wales, Sydney, has recently edited Contested Ground: Australian Aborigines under the British Crown (Allen & Unwin, Sydney) and co-edited Aboriginal Workers.

Bryan D. Palmer teaches in the Department of History of Queen's University. His most recent books are Capitalism Comes to the Backcountry: The Goodyear Invasion of Napanee and E.P. Thompson: Objections and Oppositions.

Greg Patmore teaches Industrial Relations at the University of Sydney and is author of Australian Labour History.

Michael Quinlan teaches industrial relations at the University of New South Wales and is co-author of A Divided Working Class? Ethnic Segmentation and Industrial Conflict in Australia.

Ian Radforth, a member of the University of Toronto's History Department, is author of Bushworkers and Bosses: Logging in Northern Ontario 1900-1980. He is writing a social and cultural history of mid-19th century Canada.

Jacques Rouillard teaches history at the Université de Montréal and is the author of Histoire du syndicalisme québécois.

Joan Sangster teaches history at Trent University and is the author of Dreams of Equality: Women on the Canadian Left and Earning Respect: the Lives of Working Women in Small Town Ontario, 1920-60.

Allen Seager teaches history at Simon Fraser University, with a special interest in labour and politics in Western Canada.

Winona Stevenson teaches at the University of Regina.

Lucy Taksa is co-author of Australian Readers Remember and has published on scientific management and labour culture. She teaches at the University of New South Wales.

Chris Wright teaches in the School of Industrial Relations and Organisational Behaviour at the University of New South Wales and is the author of The Management of Labour: A History of Australian Employers (Oxford University Press 1995).